The Average Internet Marketer Is What?

This whole project started out with me wanting to survey my subscribers, readers and members. As an internet marketer, blogger and membership site owner, my job is to provide the content, training and tools they need, and recommend the the good products that will help my member further their internet marketing career

I thought it would be a good idea to ask my members and find out what stage they were at, what they were missing - and more importantly what I would need to do to help them.

The results were quite interesting and a real eye opener for me. So much so that it inspired me to write this book. A book with a step by step system that is very much designed to help the "average survey taker" get into some of the more, shall we say, interesting brackets ;-)

I've included the survey question, results and my comments here - and there are a few reasons for that:

1. It's an interesting read and you can learn something about the market place we operate in, by seeing the numbers and comtemplating on my comments.
2. The survey was originally done on a 25,000 member list and got a 10% response rate. That means that it's statistically valid, chances are that the average would also apply to any list you have within the internet marketing niche. In other words you can use the results and knowledge in your own marketing.
3. As I said the survey and results was the foundation for the ebook you are about to read. Going through the survey first will give you a better understanding of the system I'm about to reveal to you.

So lets jump right into the survey...

Question 1: How long have you been involved with internet marketing?

- 6 Months or Less = 22.30%
- 6 Months to 1 Year = 22.30%
- 1 to 2 Years = 22.30%
- 2 to 5 Years = 21.19%
- 5 Years or More = 12.27%

No real surprise here, the numbers are pretty evenly spread out, and I have seen similar results before. If anything, it shows us that internet marketing is still in its infancy and thousands of new people are joining our ranks each day... I have heard a lot people say that marketing to the "internet marketing niche" is hard, the market is saturated etc. I completely disagree. I think this is the easiest niche to master, especially if you are relatively new to the game.

Question 2: Are you working full time online?

- Yes I'm full time and I make a "full time income" = 7.43%
- I'm full time online, but I don't make a "full time income" = 34.57%
- No, I have a job so I'm part time online = 57.99%

Not surprising either, when you consider the stats above - after all you don't just waltz in and create a full time income overnight. It did however surprise me to see the high number of full time marketers, not making a full time income. I have thought about this, and my guess is that the number includes a lot of "stay at home" moms and dads. They may not desperately need to create another full time income for the household, but they would like to.

Question 3: What is your income goal - why are you in internet marketing?

- To make a bit of extra cash to help make ends meet = 10.78%
- I want to create an extra stream of income (but keep my job) = 7.43%
- I want to create an income that will let me quit my job = 54.28%
- I want to be filthy rich = 27.51%

This did surprise me... a lot! I thought (and have been told) that most people who get involved in internet marketing are just interesting in making a bit of extra cash, thus falling in one of the first two categories. As it turns out the vast majority wants to quit their JOB, go full time online and be filthy rich (yeah, I know we all want that).

So, that's what people want... But what are they actually making?

Question 4: What is your monthly income from internet marketing?

- Zero, zilch, nada, nothing = 50.19%
- Less than $500 = 38.66%
- $1,001 - $2,500 = 2.60%
- $2,501 - $5,000 = 0.37%
- $5,001 - $10,000 = 0.37%
- Over $10,000 = 1.49%

Can't say that the numbers surprise me, but they sure do scare me... Over 50% not making a single cent. The number is too high to fend off with a "it's all the newbies" comment, so there must be something else at play. And this is interesting... if you correlate the numbers with the "full time" question, you will see that quite a few people consider $500-$1000 a month a full time income. Guess it could be depending on where you live and what your ambition is. It definitely wouldn't be considered a full time income here in Denmark.

That was a bit about what people are earning and what they would like to earn. Now lets look at some of the probable causes.

Question 5: Do you have your own website or blog?

- Zero, zilch, nada, nothing = 50.19%
- Yes = 71.00%
- No = 29.00%

This used to be the "Holy Grail" of internet marketing, in order to make money you need to have your own website and domain. While I can't argue that it's still important to have your own site, the numbers clearly show that it's not enough. We need something else and I think the two next questions will give us the answer.

Question 6: Are you building your own email list?

- Yes = 58.36%
- No = 41.64%

Now we're on to something (not that it surprises me at all). There is a definite correlation between building a list and making an income online, and it becomes crystal clear when you look at this...

Question 7: How many subscribers do you have on your email list?

- I'm not building a list = 29.74%
- Less than 500 = 52.04%
- 500 - 1,000 = 4.83%
- 1,001 - 2,500 = 6.69%
- 2,501 - 5,000 = 1.86%
- 5,001 - 10,000 = 1.86%
- More than 10,000 = 2.97%

Hmmm... first of all the number of people "not building a list" does not match the previous question. My best guess is that a lot of people have tried building a list but gave up because they did not see immediate results, and thus they fall into the less than 500 subscribers category.

Other than that the numbers are fairly conclusive. I would bet my entire business that almost all the people not making money online fall into the 0-500 subscribers bracket. The "high" earners (or maybe I should just say earners) correspond well to the lists sizes - however it does look like a few people with larger lists are failing to monetize them to their full potential.

Question 8: Do you own/sell your own products or programs?

- No, I'm only promoting products as an affiliate = 65.43%
- No, but I plan to create a product of my own soon = 18.22%
- Yes, I sell my own products and services = 16.36%

While interesting, I don't think this question offers any conclusive data. You don't have to create your own products/programs to make money online, there are a lot of people making a killing just with affiliate marketing - But (yes you guessed it) these people are building a list.

However, having your own products does make it a lot easier to take your internet marketing income to the next level. It also gives you leverage to utilize JVs, affiliates, integrated marketing etc. But if you look at the numbers there are a lot of people with their own products, who aren't making any significant income - I'll just jump on my soap box again and say, probably because they haven't been building a list.

Question 9: What are your favorite traffic generation methods?

This was very evenly spread out, no clear winner, and a lot of different ways to drive traffic to your site. If anything, we can conclude that it doesn't matter much where the traffic is coming from - what matters is what you do with that traffic, and to be more specific how you adapt your marketing funnel to the traffic source in question. It was also very encouraging to see that most people don't put all their eggs in one basket.

However, there was a slight tendency for traffic exchanges and safelists to rank high for most people. Doesn't surprise me when you look at some of the other numbers. They are free to low cost traffic generation methods, readily available to the newbie.

If you have an affiliate program, don't underestimate this... Provide affiliate tools optimized for safelists and traffic exchanges. It's what a large % of your affiliates use, and if you don't you are missing out on sales.

Question 10: Which affiliate network do you prefer?

I tossed this last question in out of idle interest, but the numbers where pretty conclusive - most people prefer Clickbank, probably because it's so easy to use (both as affiliate and vendor). PayDotCom came in as a strong #2, with a lot of smaller and independent networks duking it out for 3rd place.

Now on to the conclusion...

Your average subscriber is!

If you are in the internet marketing niche, your average subscriber (and/or website visitor) is:

1. Fairly new to the game (less than a years experience)
2. Working a full time JOB and doing IM part time
3. Looking to replace the JOB with a full time IM income
4. Not building a list
5. And thus failing to make any money from IM

So it would be a very safe bet to focus your product/newsletter on teaching newbies (from scratch), how to create that "job quitting" full time income online - And you need to do it by showing them how to build a list and how to monetize said list. There are a lot for fads and buzz words in this industry, but that is really what it all boils down to.

Also, if you have your own products and affiliate programs - helping your users to get that first sale, get the ball rolling on the list building etc. Will very likely generate some very loyal customers, and affiliates who are happy to promote you.

Keep in mind that your affiliate toolbox can give them the best emails in the world and tell people to mail them to their list. It doesn't really matter, because most of your affiliates can't use them - you need to provide tools and services that will help the 97% who aren't making any sales. The cynical voice will say: "If you help them build a list, they will be better affiliates anyway".

How To Set Up Your Squeeze Page & Monetize The Sign Up Process

Based on the survey results above, we're now ready to get to work. Hopefully I can help you kick start your internet marketing career. I'm going to focus on helping you get started building a profitable list, and in this chapter I'm going to talk about how to set up your squeeze page and monetize the sign up process.

The purpose of this ebook is to provide you with a step-by-step blueprint to internet marketing success. It will be based on the actual survey results, and thus targeted towards the "newbie". But every step is critically important to the whole process, so don't assume you "know it all" and think you can skip things - Unless you are already wildly successful in internet marketing, you want to take action and implement these steps today!

Don't Dig For Gold - Sell Shovels

This is where most people get it wrong... They jump from program to program, searching for that one push-button system that will make them rich. They are digging for gold in the vast world of hype and scams. What savvy marketers realize is that the real money is in teaching the millions of opportunity seekers how to make money online, and selling them the tools they need to do so. Just look at this ebook - if you think about it - I'm selling shovels right now, based on what the survey above told me the gold diggers need.

Not entirely sure what this shovel selling talk is all about? Ok, here's your first assignment: Read this sales letter from Russell Brunson and pay special attention to the part about selling shovels, (I'm not asking you to go buy the course - although it is good).

Step 1: The Tools You Need

Before we get started setting up your list building system, we need to make sure you have the 3 essential tools in place. Without these it will be impossible for you to build a profitable internet marketing business. Based on the survey and comments I realize that most people would like to get started for free. Unfortunately there are always start up costs associated with starting a business. Throughout this series I will recommend the tools and services I use, but I will also strive to give you a free alternative (if there is a decent one out there)... Ok, so here is what you need:

Auto responder: this IS the most important part of your business. It is where you will collect your subscribers and email them. Your auto responder will likely account for over 90% of your online income - this is not where you want to cut corners. Here's what I recommend: AWeber is hands down the best service. It's what I use and recommend - and it will be the auto responder of reference for the rest of this series. If you really want a free auto responder you can grab one at Email Aces (scroll down to the P.P.S. and click the link) - Be aware that you will be limited as to the size of list, numbers of emails and campaigns you can have, and they will place 3rd party ads in your emails (nothing is ever truly free).

Hosting: you need somewhere to host your pages. I use and recommend Zoot Host from Jon Atwood. Great service and very affordable. The small standard package will be more than enough for most list builders.

Ad Tracking: You need a way to track your ads. There is a gazillion ad tracking programs out there, but it is very important to use one that lets you track your conversion rates. I use and recommend Hitsconnect (you want a partner membership, so you can do conversion tracking). If you want a free service you can grab a Goto-Pro free trial here, however it's a lot harder to use than Hitsconnect.

Step 2: What Kind Of Shovel Are You Going To Sell?

Next thing you have to do is find your hook, also known as your ethical bribe (usually an ebook, video, audio file etc.). This is what is going to convince people to part with their contact info, and subscribe to your list.

Your squeeze page needs to convince them that you have information they need, and that they can only get it if they sign up - Your hook (or gift) must have enough perceived value to make this happen.

But before you pick your hook, you need to think about why you are building a list. What are you going to write about? What are you going to sell to your list? Your squeeze page and gift needs to attract the people who are interested in your topic - not much point in having a traffic exchange ebook as the lead in, if you are mainly going to write about, and sell blogging stuff.

Your list can have a broad internet marketing appeal, we do all use a wide variety of products and services - but you are best off if you focus on one niche (inside internet marketing). Establish yourself as an expert on that, and then build from there.

There are a ton of membership sites where you can find something to give away on your squeeze page. Resale Rocket is one of my favourites. If you use Instant Squeeze Page Generator to build your squeeze page, they already have a selection of gifts in there you can use.

If possible try to find a gift that you can rebrand with your own affiliate links. Having your links in hundreds of ebooks sitting on people's desktops can potentially create a lot of sales over time. Just one of those extra little income streams, as people trip your affiliate landmines.

Even better... consider writing your own ebook or creating your own product to give away on your squeeze page. That gives you full control over what you want to promote in there - but more importantly the hook is unique, they haven't seen it before, and they can't get it anywhere else. Having a unique gift will usually increase your conversion rates. If you don't want to write your own ebook, you can go to something like elance.com and get a ghost writer to do it for you.

Step 3: Set Up Your Squeeze Page

Time to set your squeeze page... I recommend that you keep it short, so everything is above the fold (means they don't have to scroll). The squeeze page has only one purpose and that's to collect subscribers, don't dilute your efforts by including banners and links to other things, it will only hurt your conversion rate. Here are the key components of a good squeeze page (don't leave any of them out):

1. A strong attention grabbing headline - this should force them to stop and read your page but also instantly point to the benefits of signing up.
2. A couple of bullet points with details. Don't list the features, list the benefits
3. A nice image of the gift they will receive
4. A strong call to action
5. Your opt-in form, remember to change the standard "submit/subscribe" button to something sexy. People don't like to submit and subscribe - but they sure do like to "Click Here For Free Instant Access!"
6. A little blurb about keeping their details private.

I have just created an example squeeze page to give you an idea. You want to create something very similar to this: See my example squeeze page here.

If HTML is a foreign language to you, I recommend that you use this free website builder, it comes with some great tutorials and some good bonuses you can use to build your squeeze page. Alternately you can use something like Instant Squeeze Page Generator, where you can point and click your way to a good squeeze page. And of course the lazy man's way would be to grab an account over at James Grandstaff's Instant MLM Squeeze Page

Finally... when you create the opt-in form for your squeeze page, you will (almost always) have the option to redirect them to a thank you page. Don't leave the standard AWeber page up, use this feature - Here's what you can do...

Step 4: Monetize Your Thank You Page

Your thank you page is a prime piece of real estate. By signing up, people have just demonstrated that they are interested in what you have to offer - it's time to test that commitment towards a sale. This is your first chance to monetize the list building process (aside from any links in your gift) - but unfortunately it's a step that most people miss. With a little bit of testing and tweaking you can often turn a profit on the thank you page alone. Here are some of the things I prefer my opt-in forms to re-direct to:

1. A one time offer: There's a free service called OTO Goldmine that will let you create one time offer within minutes. Here's an example - it took me two minutes to set up and they even host the OTO for me (and deliver the products). Notice how I'm both monetizing my thank you page, and telling them to go check their email for the confirmation link.
2. If there is a good product directly related to my gift, I like to send them straight to the sales page. They have already demonstrated an interest in the topic, and taken action on the offer. They are hot prospects to send to the sales page. I've found that this strategy works best if you can find some low cost products e.g. $7 reports or some good free to join sites, with good converting one time offers e.g. Butterfly Marketing sites.
3. Or you can use a co-registration service like Advertising Know How - You will be showing ads for other people's ezine on your thank you page, and in exchange your ezine will be shown on their thank you pages. While this won't earn you money directly, it will likely boost your list building by 20-30%, making you more money long term. When I'm sure that my follow up series is making money, I prefer to use co-registration on my thank you page, but...

The bottom line is that you have to use something, don't leave it blank - pick one of the strategies above and monetize this prime piece of virtual real estate.

Step 5: Get People To Confirm Their Subscription

Now that they have signed up for your list, and you have presented them with an offer of some sort - You want to make sure that they click the email confirmation link so you can continue to send them emails. Here are a few changes you need to make to your AWeber "Verification Message" (found under List Settings => Verified Opt-in).

Change the subject line to something like:

{!firstname_fix}, Confirm To Download Your "Gift Name" Report...

Change the verification message (Intro) to something like:

Hi {!firstname_fix},
Thank you for requesting your free copy of my "Gift Name" report. Before I can send you the download link I need to make sure I have your permission, so...

Please click the link below to go to the download page...

Finally AWeber also has a feature called the "Confirmation Success Page". Don't ever leave this blank, this is another piece of real estate you can monetize. I like to use OTO Goldmine here, especially if I'm using the co-registration on the thank you page. Here's what I do...

1. I log in at OTO Goldmine and create an offer like this one
2. I make the "no thanks" link go to my actual download page
3. And I then put the link for the OTO in AWeber, as my "Confirmation Success Page"

As you can see this serves a few purposes. First of all I will hopefully make a sale, but the page also tells them to go check their inbox for an email from you (a nice habit, we want them to get into) - and finally the "no thanks" link will send them to the download page as promised.

Step 6: Optimize Your Download Page

This is pretty straight forward, but very important. You want to keep people happy, so provide them with clear instructions (step-by-step if necessary) on how to download your gift. Your download page is also another piece of valuable real estate, where you can present them with an offer. It works best if it's a free to join thing (that pays you if they buy the OTO) - make it look like an extra bonus to their download. Here's a good download page example.

Step 7: The First Email In Your Auto Responder

This one is very important, and you want to accomplish a few things with it:

1. Give them the download link again in case they missed it - especially important since you used the "Confirmation Success Page" to send them to a one time offer.
2. You want to make them another offer. You are building a list because you want to make sales, you might as well be upfront about it, so people know what to expect (that way they won't be offended when you try to sell later on) - Again, people who just signed up are the hottest prospects on your list, and you want to cash in on that.
3. You want to hint at what is coming - make them curious, so they look forward to your next email. And let them know that you ARE going to send them more emails.

Here's my suggested template for your 1st auto responder email (of course you would need to change it to fit your campaign):

Subject: Thank You {!firstname_fix}, Here's Your Download Link

Hi {!firstname_fix},

Thank you for requesting the "Automatic Money Machines" Report. Here's the download link again, in case you missed it on the confirmation page.

=> Download Automatic Money Machines Here!

And if you haven't already, I highly recommend that you sign up for Affiliate Cash Secrets. It's my #1 recommended resource for affiliate marketers.

You Have Got Work To Do!

So that is my basic step by step guide for setting up your squeeze page and monetizing the sign up process. What you need to do now, is go through all the steps and get your whole squeeze page system set up and properly monetized. Even if you already have a live system, you probably need to go back and tweak it a bit in order to optimize and monetize.

What's Next?

In the next chapter I'm going to detail, how to write a killer follow up series and how to make money from it. Another crucial step in your system set up, and something you need to have in place before you even think about starting to drive traffic to your squeeze page.

How To Write A Killer Follow Up Series That Converts Like Crazy

The Meat & Potatoes...

Your follow up series is the meat and potatoes of your internet business. It's where you will pull in consistent sales and commissions. For myself the goal is always to make the follow up series turn a profit - meaning that it should at least cover the cost of getting new subscribers. For example, if I spend $1 on average per new subscriber, I want my follow up series to at least generate $1 per subscriber. Fortunately that is not very hard to achieve. In fact I can often turn a handsome profit on the follow ups - that of course makes the revenue from future broadcasts and promotions pure profit.

In this chapter I'm going to give you the step-by-step blueprint for setting up a great follow up series - But there are a few topics we need to cover first, so here goes...

Training Your Subscribers

Your follow up series has one main purpose (a part from making sales), and that is to train your subscribers to perform the tasks you want them to (e.g. click, read, watch, join, buy etc.). I recently wrote an article about this, it expands a bit on some of points in this article - You can find it here: The 3 C's Of Affiliate Marketing.

Train them to click: you always want to make your readers click a link when they read your email. That means that even if you just want to deliver some content, you should always put it in a PDF or on a blog. If people always anticipate that they have to click something when you mail them, they will get used to it, and it will boost your conversion rates.

Tell them what to do: Don't be afraid to tell people what to do (in fact most people like that, although they may not want to admit it). Tell your readers to click that link, to go to the blog, tell them to go watch this video or download that ebook. Getting into the habit of telling people exactly what to do will significantly increase your conversion rates. At the same time you need to limit your emails to one action. Don't promote more than one product in a single email and don't give people multiple choices of actions to take. If there really are multiple possible actions with your promotion, then let your email focus on one thing... Get them to click and then deliver the multiple choices in an ebook, video or on a blog.

They will follow systems: People may like to be told what to do, but there's one thing they like even more, and that is to follow systems. If applicable you should mark the actions they need to take as Step 1... Step 2... Step 3 etc. It's not a coincidence that what I'm writing right now, is broken up into several chapters with a step by step approach.

Make them expect the pitch: Here's a statement that often pops up in various marketing forums.

I've been sending quality content to my list for months, and then last week I sent a pitch for this great new product - my list went ballistic in a fury of unsubscribes.

The problem is not that they have been delivering good content. The problem is that they have been training their subscribers to only expect good content - no wonder they got offended when they got a sales pitch out of the blue.

There is nothing wrong with writing great free content (articles, blog posts, ebooks) for your subscribers - it can help you build a relationship with your list, install customer loyalty, and thus making selling a lot easier.

But let's face it, you are not building a list because you want to make friends, or because you find writing content super fun. You are building a list because you want to make money... period! Don't try to hide that from your subscribers. You want to include a link to something to buy in every single email. It might just be a short P.S. but you always want to have something there. This way you will train your subscribers to expect the pitch and they won't feel "exploited" when you try to sell them something - especially not if also give them some valuable content on a regular basis.

How often should I mail my list: Another question I get asked a lot. Again there's no single right answer (except maybe to mail them when you have something to write about ;-). But here are a few pointers.

You want to be fairly consistent in your mailing schedule. If you usually mail your list once or twice a month, and then suddenly move to mailing every day, you are going to piss people off (along the same lines as the "pitch" example above). Again you are training your subscribers and letting them know what to expect from you.

Pick a mailing schedule you are comfortable with and try to stick to it. Be careful not to go too long between mails. Once or twice a month is probably not enough to make an impact in the fast flowing IM world, and you risk painting yourself into a corner - I would advice you to mail your list at least once a week (including follow ups).

Consistency Is The Key

As I have just discussed above, consistency is the key when it comes to training your subscribers on what to expect from you, and in getting them to take the actions you want them to.

But it's also important that your are consistent in your writing style. You want to build a relationship with your subscribers - you want them to know, like and trust you - because that makes selling a whole lot easier.

You need to pick your writing style and stick to it. Don't try to be something you are not, people will see right through that. You can never please everyone at the same time - stick to your writing style, your topics and the kind of products you want to promote... The people that like it will stay and be your best customers, the ones that don't like it will go away - if you try to please them all you will end up with a list of indifferent people, and that does not put bread on the table.

Time For The Cynical Comment

Everything I've written so far today might come across as very cynical, and a lot of people don't like this very "in your face" approach... But again, we are in business because we want to make money. Being nice and giving away free stuff does not make you money - but it is a valuable strategy to help close a sale.

Unsubscribes are good: a lot of people get frustrated when people start unsubscribing from their list, but unsubscribes are actually a good thing. I have often said, that if you aren't getting unsubscribes, you are not pushing hard enough, and here's why:

1. It means that people are actually opening your emails ;-)
2. Unsubscribes are a lot better than spam complaints. Or having people leave your emails in a "dead" inbox that fills up and starts bouncing.
3. You are just getting rid of the people that would not buy from you anyway. And you are left with a cleaner list of people who are actually interested in what you have to say.
4. It makes it a lot easier to gauge the effectiveness of your campaigns. People that really don't want to hear from you will only mess up your stats.

Once your list gets big enough, you will probably come to realize... That it does not matter what you send to your list, your unsubscribe rate will be steady. I can almost guarantee you, that the email announcing this free ebook will get as many unsubscribes, spam complaints etc. as my last "pitch only" email.

On To Writing The Actual Follow Up Series

People often ask me how many emails they should put in their follow up series. There no right or wrong answer here, but in my opinion, more is definitely merrier. I would say that you should at least have 8 emails lined up - But the more you have, the more hands off your business will run. Generating auto pilot income, as long as you continue to put new subscribers into your system. I know people that have years worth of emails lined up. I prefer 1-2 months though and will then shift to regular broadcasts (when I have something to mail about e.g. this article).

The funnel: in line with my comments about training your subscribers, you want to set your email series up as a classic sales funnel. You start by giving something away for free (your hook, so all subs get that), then you move on to offering free to join sites that has an upgrade option attached to it. Next step is to offer them some low cost products, and then you gradually raise the entry price. Of course far from everyone will funnel all the way down to the higher price points - but you will make far more money doing it this way - rather than slamming a $1000 product in front of them as soon as they have downloaded their free gift.

It's also important that the entire sales funnel in your follow up series is relevant to what people signed up for in the first place. Your recommendations can stray a bit from the original topic/gift - but then your writing has to reflect how this can be used with, enhance, or help them use the original - or maybe how it can take them to the next level.

Step 1: Your Welcome Email

This one is very important, and you want to accomplish a few things with it:

1. Give them the download link again in case they missed it.
2. You want to make them another offer. You are building a list because you want to make sales, you might as well be upfront about it, so people know what to expect (that way they won't be offended when you try to sell later on) - Again, people who just signed up are the hottest prospects on your list, and you want to cash in on that.
3. You want to hint at what is coming - make them curious, so they look forward to your next email. And let them know that you ARE going to send them more emails.

Here's my suggested template for your 1st auto responder email (of course you would need to change it to fit your campaign):

Subject: Thank You {!firstname_fix}, Here's Your Download Link

Hi {!firstname_fix},

Thank you for requesting the "Automatic Money Machines" Report. Here's the download link again, in case you missed it on the confirmation page.

Step 2: Your Extra Bonus - Build A Relationship

In the next email I give away an extra "no strings attached" bonus, this could be an ebook, a video or similar. I've already hinted at that in my welcome email, so people will be looking for the bonus email. Gives me the perfect opportunity to enter their inbox again, and set myself of as the generous guy, they want to hear from. Here's an example email (of course you also need to change this to fit you).

Subject: Here's Your Bonus Download Link {!firstname_fix}...

Hi {!firstname_fix},

I hope you enjoyed the "Automatic Money Machines" ebook, I sent you the other day. As promised I have a bonus ebook, one that can easily triple your affiliate income.

But first... I wanted to tell you a bit about my self.

I live in Denmark and as most Europeans I'm a bit of football fanatic. But when I'm not rooting for Liverpool or my local Danish team Aab, I'm working hard on building and expanding my full time internet business. Thankfully that is my other great passion, so it doesn't really feel like a job.

Over the coming weeks I will send you a series of emails that will recommend various tools you need, in order to be a successful affiliate marketer.

I will also teach you how to use them and more importantly, why you need to use them - and I'm very much looking forward to sharing the tips, tricks and secrets that allowed me to replace my army job with a full time internet marketing income.

And now for your bonus ebook... It's a great ebook called "The 5 Critical Tools for a Successful Affiliate Business", you can download it here:

=> Download 5 Critical Tools Here!

Thanks again {!firstname_fix}, enjoy the ebook - I'll be in touch shortly with some hot internet marketing tips for you.

Have a great day,

Soren Jordansen
www.Soren Jordansen.com

P.S. And if you haven't already, I highly recommend that you sign up for Affiliate Cash Secrets. It's my #1 recommended resource for affiliate marketers.

=> Affiliate Cash Secrets

As you can see I'm trying to accomplish a few things with this email:

1. I tell them that the bonus is there, but I don't give them the link right away - I want them to read the email first.
2. The little blurb about me is meant to put a face on the marketer, and build a relationship with my subscribers. I'm not just the cold hard selling machine, I'm the Dane who loves football and roots for Liverpool.
3. Then I tell them a little bit about what to expect. I let them know that I am going to mail them on a regular basis and that I am going to recommend products to them.
4. But then I let them know that I'm going to teach them the "how and why" - that I'm successful, and that I want to share my knowledge with them
5. Finally I use the P.S. to soft sell something to them - both to "train" them to expect that, but of course also because it's nice to give them a second stab at the product I recommended in my welcome email.

Hopefully the end result is that they are happy (they got a bonus download)... They feel they know me a bit better (maybe they even like and trust me)... and they are looking forward to seeing what kind of tip I have to share in my next email.

Step 3: Promoting Free To Join Sites

Next you want to add some emails promoting good free to join sites, that pay you commissions when people buy the one time offer. At this stage in your follow up series it's much easier to get people to join a free program, than it is to get them to buy something. It's also my experience that you can make as much (if not more) in commissions, if you do it the right way.

You will be seen as the nice guy finding all this great value content and giving it to them for free . If you write some good emails you can cash in on the one timer offer commissions, and use the "free to join section" to expand your relationship with your list, setting yourself up to make future sales. Fortunately it's pretty easy to write an email that gives away free stuff, here are a few components you should include.

1. Include a small blurb about yourself - It just has to be a few lines that will help people relate to you and feel that they are getting to know you even better. Remember that this is going into an auto responder. Don't write something about wrapping x-mas gifts, people might read it in July.
2. Relate the free gift to the original topic/gift of your list. It does not have to be more than one or two lines. But it's important that you don't just throw random promotions at them - it has to be something that will help them accomplish part of what they originally signed up to learn (if not you have to tell them why this new thing is also important).
3. Then you actually pitch the product - doesn't have to be much, as it's not hard to sell free. The sites will almost always have some good affiliate tools, so you can borrow a few lines to use here.

4. It will most likely boost your conversion rate on the one time offer, if you also mention the upgrade options. Tell them that it's free to join, but if they want to put their xyz into overdrive, they should pay close attention to the special offer - The extra videos really helped you etc... (you get the idea ;-)

Subject: My Geeky Day Is Your Gain {!firstname_fix} - Free Step-By-Step Video Tutorials...

Hi {!firstname_fix},

I was just sitting here rummaging in my Cpanel, cleaning up a few cluttered data bases - Yes I can be a bit geeky, but it's internet marketing, so that's allowed.

But then it dawned on me, that I'm in the minority here.

A lot of affiliate marketers never get their business off the ground, because they are too busy banging their head against a wall of tech problems they have no idea how to solve. Even if they wanted to outsource it they would have no idea what to ask the programmer to do.

Does that sound familiar {!firstname_fix}, if so you could probably use these great step-by-step videos.

They go through all the different aspects of managing your own hosting. It's how I learned it, and I'm sure you can use it for your websites too.

You get the first videos and some cool bonuses for free, but you should keep an eye out for the special offer when you sign up. If you see it, you will get a chance to snap up the entire package for next to nothing - I did, and it made a world of difference for me.

I would say that you need at least 5 of these "free to join" emails in your follow up series, but the more you have the better - as long as you can keep them relevant and follow the formula above.

With all the BFM and LFM sites out there, there are thousands of sites to choose from and you'll be able to find offers for just about any niche.

Step 4: Selling Products

Now that you have warmed up your list, built a relationship and showed them that you have some good stuff to share - You can start adding some emails that sell products directly. These emails should follow the same basic formula as the "free to join" emails above. But when you are asking for money upfront, you generally have to write a longer email - to highlight the benefits of the purchase, and to counter their possible objections. If you want to learn more about how to write good emails that sell, I highly recommend that you watch these free videos.

I personally don't like to add a lot of sales emails to my follow up series, as I prefer to keep my schedule open for JVs and new launches. But you can add as many as you like - I have a few sub-lists that are maxed out with these super cut & paste emails.

You should keep the "sales funnel" in mind if you are adding more than one product to the end of your follow up series - start with low cost first and then work your way up to the more expensive items. If you are adding a lot of products you want to break up the barrage of sales pitches with the occasional free gift or free to join site - or maybe some good content blog posts that link to a few recommended products.

Power Tip 1: When you are promoting a new launch to your list, consider writing an honest review on your blog and send them there first. You can then keep adding short emails to your follow up series, sending people to these reviews. This way you can set yourself up as their "crap filter" - you are giving them content, honest reviews and recommendations (but of course you are selling at the same time). By adding these to your AR you will be making sales long after all the other affiliates have forgotten about the launch and product.

Power Tip 2: I like to add products with recurring commissions to my follow up series. That way I can make the sale once and get paid over and over again. Here are a few that work great for me (+ instruction on how to join the affiliate program).

Power Tip 3: The Perfect Program For Your Follow Up Series

My good Aussie friend Cindy Battye recently launched her new "Daily Niche Idea" site, and I just wanted to give you a few quick tips. You see, Cindy's new site is a perfect match for your auto responder follow up series - it's one of those great free to join sites, that can earn you a ton of commissions. Here are the 4 reasons why I recommend that you add it to your follow up series.

1. You will be giving away some very valuable resources to your subscribers, and they will love you for it. They get access to Cindy's niche research, complete with recommended products to promote, and PLR articles, ebooks etc.
2. You will earn commissions directly from Daily Niche Idea when your referrals grab the upgrade (and a lot of them do). If you are going to promote it yourself, I highly recommend that you upgrade.
3. Daily Niche Idea also works as a downline builder. People you refer will be joining under you in some of the best affiliate programs and traffic exchanges. That's a second stream of income, on top of the direct commissions.
4. All the emails going out to your referrals will have your affiliate links in them. Cindy will continue to sell on your behalf and you don't have to worry about anything... other than collecting your commissions checks.

So basically, that is 3 (or more) income streams, just for promoting 1 link and giving people a valuable freebie - and that's why I highly recommend that you join, upgrade and add this to your auto responder today.

=> Join Daily Niche Idea Here!

If You Have Your Own Products...

The steps above were written with affiliate promotions in mind, but they also apply if you have your own products. If you are selling your own products and services you want to write as many of them as you can into your follow up series (if they fit the list/niche topic). Follow the same approach, free gift(s) first, then free to join with upsells, and finally selling your products (going from low to high cost).

What You Have Now & What's Next ...

After reading and implementing the steps in chapter 1, you should have a squeeze page system set up and properly monetized. When you are done implementing the steps in this chapter, you will also have a profit pulling email series in place - That is basically all you need to become a successful list builder and make some serious money in this business.

Of course now you need to put some people through your system and sales funnel, in other words, drive traffic to your squeeze page. Funny enough that is what I will be covering in the next chapter: "How to drive traffic to your squeeze page and make it convert".

How To Drive Massive Amounts Of Traffic To Your Squeeze Page

In this chapter I'm going to show you the next step - how to drive traffic to your squeeze page, and how to make sure that traffic converts into new subscribers, and thus money in your pocket.

There are hundreds of ways to generate traffic - I'm going to focus on the ones I use the most, which of course also are the most effective for me. As with the other articles I'm going to rank these step by step - note that it does not mean that #1 is the best, it means that I believe #1 to be the easiest to master and get results from. You don't have to use all the traffic sources, you need to figure out what works best for you and how many sources you can use effectively. But at the same time you don't want to limit yourself to just one source.

You will always hear a lot of people say that this and that traffic source does not work or does not create results. I couldn't disagree more, there is no such thing as bad traffic. It's what you do with your traffic that matters - what offer you present and how you do it. Sure you will likely get a better conversion rate from PPC than you will from traffic exchanges - but at the end of the day, what matters is your return on investment (money or time). Comparing conversion rates across methods is like comparing apples to oranges, but you can compare cost per sign up and use that to find the traffic methods that work best for you.

Tracking Your Conversion Rates

I mentioned this briefly in the first article - It's very important that you track your conversion rates, because you want to know:

1. What works, so you can focus your time and money on the traffic resources that perform best for you.
2. What to change on your squeeze pages, in order to improve your conversion rates and what version of your squeeze page works best with a given traffic method.
3. The cost per sign up - You can then compare that to what you earn (on average) per subscriber going through your follow up series. Knowing these 2 numbers will allow you to put your list building into overdrive, because you can basically use this to "buy" unlimited traffic and still be in profit.

In the next chapter I will go into more detail on tracking, how to split test and improve your conversion rates. But for now it will be enough to say that you need to track your conversion rates - here's how to do it...

You need to use a tracking service that allows your to track conversion rates. I use and recommend Hitsconnect (you want a partner membership, so you can do conversion tracking).

When you set up your tracking link, you will get a small piece of code that you can add to your thank you page. You will then be able to see how many subscribers you get , where they are coming from and what that cost you. As I said this is invaluable information - you need it to build a truly effective and profitable campaign.

I recommend that you add the conversion tracking code to your download page (or whatever page they go to after clicking the verification link) - that way you will be tracking what matters, new subscribers. Not much point in advertising somewhere that brings in a ton of (fake) sign ups, if none of them verify their subscription.

If you want to know more about conversion tracking, I recommend that you download this free ebook "Tracking Your Way To Profits".

And Now The Traffic Generation Methods

Here are 4 very simple traffic generation methods you can start using today (and they are all free to low cost).

I have chosen these 4 first because they are the easiest to get started with, and because they are the best suited for the squeeze page set up, I taught you in the first chapter. In the next chapter I'm going to show you some more advanced strategies, if you can't wait, there are links for a couple of extra ebooks in this post. But for now let's get started driving traffic and building your list with...

Traffic Method 1: Traffic Exchanges

Traffic exchanges are one of the most misunderstood traffic sources out there. A lot of people will tell you that they don't work and that they provide worthless untargeted traffic. Nothing could be further from the truth, but as with other methods you have to make them work for you, by using them the right way.

First off all we know exactly why people are using traffic exchanges. They want to make money online, they want free traffic, and they are likely using that traffic to promote a "make money program" of some sort. As you can see the traffic is very targeted if we provide what people want e.g. "how to make money online", "how to get tons of free traffic", "how to recruit more people to their biz opp" or any combination of these 3. On the other hand you will be wasting your time marketing other niche products on traffic exchanges, people might be interested in e.g. football, but they are not surfing traffic exchanges to learn about football. If you want to promote niche products on exchanges you need to spin in from the "make money" angle.

And since we know people are busy surfing to generate traffic to their own pages, we can't expect them to read a long sales letter. You only have a few seconds to catch their attention before they click on to next site so you need to get their attention fast - then you want to get their contact info so you can follow up and make the sale. It's extremely difficult to sell directly on a traffic exchange, because people are not searching for products they are advertising their own business... So always use traffic exchanges to build a list and then go for the sale on the back end.

The squeeze page and monetization plan outlined in chapter 1 is perfect for traffic exchange use.

With a good traffic exchange optimized hook and squeeze page, you are ready to venture into TE land. But before you go I must warn you that there are thousands of exchanges out there, but very few of them are actually worth using. I highly recommend that you focus your efforts on 5-10 of the big ones - basically you want to have your site shown 24-7 in the exchanges and if you are just starting out you can't do that with 30 (you will just dilute your efforts). Furthermore, the people surfing the smaller exchanges are likely also in the big ones, you might as well grab them there... As your advertising budget expands, you can start testing more exchanges and adding the good ones to your list.

Here are a few of the best traffic exchanges:

1. Dragon Surf
2. Traffic-Splash
3. I Love Hits
4. Advertising Know How
5. StartXchange
6. Traffic Bunnies

These 6 exchanges are a good starting point, and you can then expand with the exchanges that make it into the top 10-15 over at Affiliate Funnel.

At first you are probably aiming for 1 new subscriber per 200 views on the exchanges, but over time you will be looking to bring that down to 1 per 100 (or better) - That may not sound like much, but when you factor in the low cost of traffic exchange credits, this is actually very cost-effective. If you have implemented the monetization steps from article one and have a good follow up series in place, you will very likely turn a profit, when you buy credit packages from the 6 exchanges above.

Of course you can also surf a bit to get some extra free advertising, but I don't recommend surfing too much. Time is money and the time you spend surfing is better spent tweaking your squeeze page and follow up series - and on using the extra traffic methods below.

Traffic Method 2: Safelists

Safelists are another great source of free advertising and leads. They used to be extremely effective, but the emergence of auto submitters, inbox cleaners, validators etc. almost brought the industry to it's knees. And you will hear a lot of people tell you to stay away from safelists. They are partly right, you need to stay away from all the automated rubbish, but...

With the invention of credit based safelists, the industry has gotten a real revival and safelists are once again a very profitable advertising venue, if you use them the right way.

Most of what you just read about traffic exchanges also applies to safelists. It's basically the same kind of users (target market) and it's very important that you use them to build your own list. Here are a few extra points that will help make you a successful safelist advertiser...

The basic principle behind safelists is that advertisers get together and agree to receive email ads from each other. Therefore you can expect a lot of email especially when you start using a lot of different lists. So under NO circumstance should you use your main email account when you sign up for safelists. Quite a few companies will try to sell you "safelist friendly" email accounts, but don't waste your money - nothing works better for safelists than a free Gmail account.

As with traffic exchanges, there are thousands of safelists on the market and most of them are worthless. They are either small "hobby" lists run by amateurs or they are populated by auto submitters with no real people reading your ads. You need to focus on 5-10 good solid credit based safelists, and then post to these as often as possible.

As I said it's the same target market as on the traffic exchanges. Work at home/make money people, who are often just getting started. They are looking for free traffic and for information on how to "make it" in internet marketing. With the the squeeze page and follow up series you created after reading the first two articles, you are poised to give them what they are looking for.

You don't want to write long ad copy for your safelist ads, and you certainly don't want to send people directly to a sales page. Here's what you need to do:

1. You need a good strong, and interesting, subject line to increase open rate on your ads.
2. Your ad should be short and to the point - you just want to create enough curiosity to make people want to click on to your squeeze page. A good strong sub headline, a few benefit laden bullet points and a strong call to action is all you need.
3. Understand that most readers will only open your ad because they need to get to the credit link at the bottom. Your job is to either stop them before they reach it and send them to your squeeze page, or to at least pre-sell them on what they will see when they click the credit link.

Focus your safelist advertising on capturing leads. Link to your squeeze page both from the ads and from the credit links.

Many get overwhelmed with the amount of emails they receive from safelists, and by the time it takes to use these programs. You need to follow a good system that will minimize the amount of time your spend and maximize your results. In the Ultimate Safelist Survival Guide you will discover how to become a super effective safelist advertising machine, generating thousands of leads from free traffic.

Recommended resources:

Ultimate Safelist Survival Guide

Affiliate Funnel Safelists

Traffic Hoopla Top 10 Safelists

Traffic Method 3: Viral List Builders

These programs are even more effective than safelists. You can't mail all the members like you can on a safelist, you can only mail your own downline. That means that people receive fewer emails from these lists, and therefore they are much more likely to use their primary email address. That translates into a better conversion rate for you. The downside is that you actually have to build/start a downline you can mail. But with most good viral list builders you can upgrade and instantly be able to mail thousands of people.

Like with safelists you should use these viral list builders to promote a squeeze page, so you can build your own list, and you do it in much the same way. However you should note that there are usually no credit links on viral list builders, so your subject line and ad copy is much more important for conversion rates. List Bandit and ViralURL are two excellent viral list builders, and taking up the one time offer in both of them was one of my best decisions ever.

There are a couple of credit based viral list builders out there, I guess you can say they are a crossbreed between the viral list builders and safelists. List Joe and List Auction are both worth joining and upgrading in. And you can see more list building programs in Affiliate Funnel.

Join a few of the better list building programs and upgrade (you get the best deals on the OTO when joining). Then mail them as often as possible, always linking to your squeeze page. I can guarantee you, that this will build you a nice list fast.

Traffic Method 4: Signature Links

Email signature: With most email programs you can automatically set up a signature link. Put in a couple of lines of catchy text and then link to your squeeze page. Once you set it up, it's a very hands off form of advertising. It can really compound over time (just think about how many emails you send a day). It also gives you a good reason to pass on those funny emails your annoying friends keep sending you. Forward them to your contacts and hope they go viral, just remember to include your signature ad ;-)

Forum signatures: can be one of the most effective forms of advertising generating highly targeted traffic. Simply add a line or two of text and a link for your squeeze page. It's very important that you don't just rush in and spam forums. Pay attention to the rules, participate in the discussions, network with the other members etc. If you become a part of the "community", people will be more than happy to click your link and sign up for your list. To put your forum advertising into overdrive I highly recommend that you get your hands on Cindy's Forum Traffic Gold.

What You Have Now & What Is Coming

If you have been implementing the steps in the first 2 chapters, you should have a fully monetized squeeze page system and follow up email series set up. Start implementing the traffic methods above and put as many people as possible through your sales funnel. Remember to track your conversion rates, so you can focus on the traffic sources that work best for you. Read the Free Traffic Secrets ebook for more ideas on how to drive traffic to your squeeze page.

In the next chapter I'm going to go into more depth on the conversion tracking, showing you how you can easily split test your way to better results from any traffic source. And I'm going to give you the skinny on a few advanced traffic generation methods.

How To Drive Even More Traffic To Your Squeeze Page

In the previous chapter I was discussing "how to drive massive amounts of traffic to your squeeze page". Though very effective, the traffic sources I listed were also very beginner friendly. Here I'm going to take it to the next level and show you how to drive even more traffic, with some more advanced resources - note that these aren't supposed to replace the resources in the last article, they are meant to be add-ons to your overall traffic strategy.

But before we get started on that we need to take a close look at your conversion tracking...

Conversion Tracking & Split Testing

Hopefully you have set up your conversion tracking after reading the last chapter. As I mentioned there are a couple of reasons why you want to pay close attention to your conversion tracking stats, let's take a close look at two of them...

1. With proper conversion tracking you know the exact cost of one new subscriber to your list. If you (on average) pay 25 cents per subscriber at source A, and 50 cents at source B - you of course want to focus your advertising budget on source A (all other things being equal).

But since you have monetized your sign up process and have a good auto responder follow series - you also know roughly how much money you make from each new subscriber going through your follow up series.

So if you earn $1 per person going through your follow up series (that's a very realistic number btw), and we take a look at the example above - you would of course keep purchasing as much traffic as you can from both source A and B, for as long as the conversion rates and earnings stays up.

And that's the beauty of doing proper conversion tracking and knowing your numbers. You can pretty much automate (pay for) most of your traffic generation and still be in profit - and that leaves you with time for testing and tweaking your pages, emails etc. to improve your conversions and earnings, and for developing new systems and products.

2. But just because you are in profit doesn't mean you should be satisfied. You should use your conversion tracking to continuously improve your squeeze page. That way you can raise your conversion rates, decrease your cost per subscriber and in turn allow you to build your list faster, for bigger long term profits.

What you want to do is run some simple split tests on your squeeze pages. I'm not talking about advanced taguchi testing, although you can do some pretty advanced stuff with a free Google Analytics account - I'm talking about simple A/B split tests, here's what you want to do:

1. Make two versions of your squeeze page (for each different traffic source). Rotate the two pages so each of them get 50% of the traffic. This is very easy to manage using Hitsconnect as they have both conversion tracking and rotators.
2. You want to test simple changes, like a different headline, changing one of the bullet points, changing the font style or background colour etc. You ONLY want to split test one thing at a time, otherwise you won't know what is causing the change in conversion rates.
3. When you have collected enough tracking stats to determine e.g. which headline is converting the best. You toss out the losing squeeze page and keep the winner.
4. Then you try to beat the winner by creating a new squeeze page testing something else, like changing a bullet point.

This sort of split testing is an ongoing process, that will continue to improve your conversion rates and thus both speed up your list building and earn you more money.

If you want to know more about conversion tracking, I recommend that you download this free ebook: Tracking Your Way To Profits.

And now it's time to start generating even more traffic to your squeeze page...

Step 1: Using JV Giveaways

I have been using JV giveaways for years, and as a result I have added thousands of new subscribers to my lists. Contributing to a giveaway is one of the fastest and most effective list building techniques I know of.

Essentially a giveaway is a huge co-registration/list building JV... All the contributors upload a gift and then promote the event to their existing lists. The members, who sign up for the giveaway, can then browse all the gifts, and if they find something they like, they need to sign up for that particular contributors list to get the download link. As a general rule gifts will rank by the number of referrals contributors put in - and the higher your rank is, the more subscribers you will likely get from the event.

If you have followed the steps in the first two articles, it should be easy for you to get started using JV Giveaways. The squeeze page set up and follow up series are perfect for this - and as you build your list using the other traffic methods, you can leverage that list to rank well in the giveaways, and thus bring in even more subscribers.

Power Tip: You want to be on the first page of the giveaway, but you don't want to put more of your own subscribers in there, than absolutely necessary to achieve it. I tend to use safelists and list builders a lot when promoting giveaways. That way I can still build my gift rank and get a lot of new subscribers, without having to share my existing list with all the other contributors.

Here are a couple of recommended JV Giveaway resources.

JV Giveaway Secrets an excellent free to join site with some good information on how to best use giveaways. But the main reason I'm recommending it, is that they will also keep you updated on new giveaway events that are worth contributing to.

My Giveaway Secrets a great ebook by my good friend Derrick VanDyke. It's an excellent step-by-step guide for people who want to start using giveaways to build a profitable email list. You can read more about the book and Derrick's affiliate program here: Giveaways, Paypal Payments & More.

Step 2: Using Article Marketing To Build Your List

Article marketing is a long term strategy that can build a consistent flow of traffic to your squeeze page. Here's how it works:

You write some short 400-600 word articles on the same topic as your squeeze page, free gift and follow up series. Whatever you write about make sure it does not read as a sales letter, your articles should be purely informative. If you don't want to write your own articles you can do like me, and go to somewhere like elance.com to find a ghost writer.

You then submit your articles to all the popular article directories, my two favourites are Ezine Articles and Isnare.

When webmaster and ezine publishers look for free content to reprint on their websites and in their newsletters, they turn to the article directories. In exchange for the free content, the publishers agree to leave the article intact and include your resource box. This is where you get your traffic... Every time someone reprints one of your articles, your resource box is included, with a link to your website. Because the article directories often have a good search engine rank you are also likely to get some search traffic to your articles - provided that you write about a topic people actually search for (and use a headline + keywords that are optimized for the search engines).

The key to getting good results from article marketing is to write an awesome author resource/bio box. This is an incredibly crucial part of the system, that you need to spend some time on. Don't waste the efforts of your article writing by slapping down an ineffective bio box like:

Joe Schmo is an expert in golf. Click here to find out more info on golf
=> www.golfmastery.com

Consider the author resource box like an ultra-small salespage where your one goal is to get that reader to click on your link. You only have a few sentences to hook the reader with curiosity and then give him a powerful reason why he should click on your link.

In our example, I would probably use something similar to the following:

Joe Schmo is a golfing expert who recently developed an eCourse that details a step by step process for adding greater distance to your long drives. If you are interested in learning more about his "5 Ways To Add Distance To Your Drives" eCourse and shedding strokes of your game, please go here:
=> www.golfmastery.com

Power Tip - The 2 Part Strategy: Consider breaking your articles up into two parts. You can then post the first part to the article directories (include "Part 1" in your headline) - in your resource box you then get people to click the link to get part 2 of the article. If your articles are good, that will give your click through rate a significant boost. You can either post part 2 on your blog (which would then have some form of lead capture on it) - or you can send them to a squeeze page where they opt-in to get part 2 (and probably another freebie to convince them to part with their contact details).

If you want to learn more about how to use article marketing effectively, I recommend that you download these two great free ebooks: Free Traffic Secrets and The 22 Step Plan

Step 3: Using Your Blog To Build Your List

Using a blog is the absolute easiest way to rank well in the search engines. Set up a Wordpress blog and start posting articles on the niche topic you are trying to build your list in. I'm not going to write a whole lot about how to set up your blog and get traffic to it - I've already covered that in the "How To Setup A Profitable Blog" bonus article at the end of this ebook.

The key is to convert some of the search engine and web 2.0 traffic, your blog will be generating, into subscribers for your list. I know I'm a bit biased ;-). But the most effective way I know of, is to add a Floating Action Button with an optin form to your blog. Most people just add their opt-in-form at the top of their blog's sidebar and never pay attention to it again - sure it will catch the odd new subscriber but...

Wouldn't it be far more effective if your opt-in form would follow them. Float down the page with them and be ready to grab the new subscriber at the instant they decide that they like your writing? Of course it would and that's why we created Floating Action Button.

...And if you want to learn more about blogging I highly recommend these resources:

FirePow

Wordpress Made Easy

7 SEO Tips For Wordpress

Step 4: Building Your List With PPC Advertising

I've saved Pay Per Click (PPC) advertising for last, because it's one of the hardest traffic generation methods to master - also I don't use PPC very much, so I'm by no means an expert. But it deserves to be mentioned because it can, without a doubt, be one of the fastest and most cost effective ways to build a list. If you want to learn a bit more about PPC advertising I recommend that you download this free ebook: Adwords Made Easy

I've seen a lot of people waste a ton of money on Adwords, because they rushed into something they didn't really understand. Here are a couple of warnings you need to pay attention to, before you start your first PPC campaign.

1. Remember that you pay for every click - it does not matter if people subscribe or not. Use the other traffic sources to make sure you have a squeeze page with a decent conversion rate before you start running it in Adwords.
2. Figure out what you earn on average per subscriber going through your one time offers and follow up series. That number along with your conversion rate will determine the maximum you want to pay per click. For example, if you have a 50% conversion rate and you earn $1 per new sub you could afford to pay up to $0.50 per click and still break even.
3. Google will assign a quality score to your landing page - basically the better your quality score, the less you have to pay per click. The short squeeze page we have been using so far is not that good for PPC campaigns. What you can do is take that page and add an article beneath it (the article needs to relate to the keywords you use in your campaign)

If you really want to get into PPC advertising I highly recommend seeking out Perry Marshall and/or Simon Leung, they are THE authorities on PPC advertising.

So Was That All The Traffic Sources

Nope... Not by a long shot. As I have said before there are hundreds if not thousands of ways to generate traffic to your squeeze page. What I have highlighted here, and in the previous chapter, are the methods I use the most. As a list builder the key is to look at all the different traffic generation methods and think, "hmmm... how can I use this to build my list?" And again, I highly recommend that you also read the Free Traffic Secrets.

What You Have Now & What Is Coming...

We are approaching the end of this this ebook. If you have been following my suggestion so far, you should now have a fully monetized squeeze page system, a great follow up series and a steady stream of traffic that converts into new subscribers. Your job is to keep that flow coming and to keep testing and tweaking, so you can keep increasing your conversion rates and earnings.

With a constantly growing list of subscribers you are well on your way to true internet marketing success - in the final chapter, I'm going to discuss how you can leverage that list to get in on juicy JV deals, create your own products etc. This is where we start talking about getting "filthy rich" on the internet.

How To Get Filthy Rich On The Internet

Time for the 5th and final chapter in this step-by-step list building system. In the first 4 chapters I have focused on setting up a full list building system, monetizing the sign up process, and putting up a great follow up series, featuring good affiliate programs. Now we're going to take what you've learned so far, and explore how you can take it to the next level.

So How Do You Get Filthy Rich On The Internet?

Following the steps in the first 4 chapter is a very good start. Building your own list is extremely important if you want to be successful in internet marketing, and you can make a very decent income just from promoting affiliate products... But in order to take your internet marketing career to the next level (the filthy rich part), you really need to have your own products. As you are about to discover, setting up your own product isn't that difficult. But first lets take a look at some of the benefits from having your own products.

Leverage Your Affiliate Program

If you have your own product, you can also have an affiliate program. By giving your affiliates an incentive (usually cash commissions) to promote your pages - you can move from just you promoting your squeeze pages, to having hundreds, even thousands, of people driving traffic to your site. Sure you give up a percentage of each sale, but the extra sales will outweigh that by far... Being able to run an affiliate program is one of the biggest reasons why you want to have your own products.

Leverage The Power Of Joint Ventures

With your own products you are also poised to do joint ventures with other marketers... You can promote their products to your list of customers/members, and they can return the favor. You can find products related to your service and add them to your auto responder follow up series. Not only will you earn commissions on any sales you make, but you can get your JV partners to turn around and add your product to their follow series. You can also do various other forms of integration marketing with your JV partners, including swapping thank you page ads, log in/log out ads, exit pop ups etc. Doing joint ventures like this is arguably the fastest and most profitable way to grow an internet business.

Leverage Your First Product To Expand...

Launching a product, doesn't matter if it's a free or paid service, ultimately comes down to building a list of customers/members. Chances are that your original customers will be the people most likely to buy from you again. In other words you can leverage your original lists to launch new products and services. This particular strategy is very well covered in Robert Puddy's Mastering The Membership Model ebook, you can download a free copy here.

Setting Up Your First Product...

... Is actually quite easy. In line with Robert's ebook above, I highly recommend that you set up your first product as a free to join membership site. I use and recommend the full version of the Launch Formula Marketing Script. But if you purchase the one time offer at either Floating Action Button or Tweet My Blog you will actually get a free copy of the LFM Lite script, which is perfect for setting up your first product.

Creating a free product, that people want to sign up to get, is very similar to the process I described in the first chapter: How To Set Up Your Squeeze Page & Monetize The Sign Up Process. Here's a rough battle plan for you.

1. Create a free product that has enough value to make people want to sign up at your membership site to get it.
2. When they sign up for the freebie you present them with a one time offer. This could be for an upgraded version of the product, some related products, rebrand rights to the ebook etc. This will of course generate some profit that you can reinvest, and thus grow your site faster. But the real purpose of the OTO is to generate commissions for your affiliates and JV partners - keep them happy and keep them building your list.
3. Then you have your follow up series for your new customers. With a free to join program you want to monetize it the same way as I explained in chapter 2: How To Write A Killer Follow Up Series That Converts Like Crazy. Of course now that you have your own product, with an affiliate program - you should put more effort into finding JV partners, so you can swap auto responder emails.
4. Use your new list of members (and affiliates) to launch new products and services.

Using something like Launch Formula Marketing, makes all of this very easy. It has an inbuilt affiliate program (every member is automatically an affiliate), it automatically integrates with your auto responder and it presents the one time offers to your new members.

Some Ideas For Your First (Free) Product

Write a short ebook on a topic people in your niche are interested in. If you don't want to write your own ebook you can go to elance.com and hire a ghost writer. You can get a super quality ebook written for under $500. If you go the ebook route, it's pretty simple to come up with a good one time offer - you can offer rebranding rights or maybe resale rights, plus some related bonuses.

Doesn't have to be an ebook, you can give away software, scripts, plugins etc. Tweet My Blog is a good example of free to join site, giving away a free Wordpress plugin. Again you can go to a freelance site like elance and get a programmer to create something for you.

Another (very simple) option is to grab one of the many private label rights products out there, and put your own spin on it. New graphics, edit the sales letter a bit, maybe bundle a few products together. Resale Rocket is my favourite place to hunt for good PLR and resale rights products.

You should also consider making your first product an interview product. Get on the phone and interview some marketers on a topic your target market would be interested in. By interviewing successful marketers you get the benefit of becoming "famous by association" - and if they are willing to do the interviews in the first place, chances are that you can also get them to promote your product (instant high profile JV partners right there). I highly recommend that you grab a free copy of Bob Jenkins' Teleseminar Formula - It will show you step by step how to get an interview product set up in 10 days or less.

I also recommend the Dominating Clickbank Videos. They will show you step by step how to take a resale rights product and turn it into your own successful product. I actually used Dominating Clickbank as the blueprint for one of my first product launches, and as you might have guessed, that turned out pretty well for me ;-)

We're At The End Of The System

I hope you have enjoyed reading about my list building system... And that following the steps, have gotten you started building a list and that you are starting to see some profits from your efforts. As I said the first 4 chapters deal with laying down the foundation for internet marketing success, and it's something I believe everyone should set up... before even starting on creating their own product. But as we have discussed in this chapter, creating your own products is the key to taking it to the next level... and possibly getting filthy rich on the internet.

Oh, but before we end this completely - I did promise you a bonus chapter didn't I? Flick on to the next page to read it...

How To Setup A Profitable Blog Or Mini Site

Written by Andrew Hansen from FirePow.

Step 1 - Niche Research

The first key to the success of a blog or mini site is that it has to target a group of people (a niche) who are hungry for information of a specific nature. In other words, I'm talking about the selection of your niche.

The group of people that your blog or mini site targets has to be a group of people who have problems. Problems in the sense that they are looking for a solution to something, looking to improve something. Furthermore, in a great niche, that SOMETHING, is something that causes pain. Financial pain, physical pain, emotional pain, some sort of pain, for the simple reason that people who have pain are the people who will want to buy solutions to that pain, and hopefully from your website.

If that sounds a bit sick, trying to exploit people with pain, it's not. It's called marketing. You've had marketers doing it to you your whole life and you probably never even knew about it, why can't you do it too? And what's more, you're actually going to provide these people with a real solution, so you're being helpful!

Anyhow moving on.

So you're looking for a group of people with a problem, but that's not all.

Your next concern has to be whether there are enough of these people searching for solutions to their problems on the internet. How many is enough you ask? It's a good question. With certain kinds of sites, all you need is 10 visitors to your site a day and you can turn a nice monthly profit. Other niches and products that you promote you might need thousands per day. It all depends on what you sell, and who to, AND how much commission you make when you sell to them.

The things you should do are look at the search volume, as indicated by a tool like Wordtracker. Here you're simply looking at how many searches per day a particular keyphrase gets in the search engines. Then after that, you want to look at whether there are other sites or blogs that are competing in the same niche.

Contrary to what a lot of people think, NO competition isn't necessarily a good thing. NO competition could and often does mean that it's not a profitable niche. What you actually want is SOME competition, but CRAPPY competition that you can DESTROY by making a better site, providing better content and in a better way.

The final piece of the puzzle of finding a good niche, is whether the niche has a quality product for you to promote. You need something to sell to these people, that is high quality, has great marketing material (sales letter etc, so it will convert your traffic well) and pays a decent commission.

This is of course assuming you're looking at the affiliate marketing model of making money with your blog - which I suggest if you're looking to retire from your job and earn a full time passive income, you SHOULD be. There are other ways to make money where you might think about some different factors in your niche selection.

So if you can combine all of the above factors when selecting your niche, you'll be giving yourself and your new blog the best possible chance of success. I hope you've found this valuable.

=> Ramp Up Your Blogging Traffic & Profits With Firepow Today!

Step 2 - Site Creation

Once your niche is selected, you obviously need to create a website to capitalize on it.

Blogs in particular have become such a popular choice for niche marketers because of their extreme ease of use, ease in maintaining, and ease in updating. Not to mention that the structure of a blog is generally by nature, search engine friendly. AND furthermore, where it isn't, there is always a third party plugin to make it so.

There are many ways to create a successful blog, and the one you choose should reflect an understanding of your target market. What we'll look at here is an example of one such method, that focuses on the generation of free traffic, and the promotion of an affiliate program for monetization.

The first thing you need to do is create a blog that's visually or aesthetically sound. A visually sound blog, other than just looking pretty, is arranged in a way that maximizes all the content you create, by maintaining your readers attention, and drawing the most attention to your affiliate program.

There are a few ways you want to do this:

1. Choose a blog theme with a predominantly white background and with black text. Simple advice, but often ignored. Black on white is the easiest for the eyes to read. Other colour schemes can quickly tire the eyes and make it hard to maintain concentration.
2. Choose a clean and neat theme. You don't want too much going on. It should be very clear where your content is located, very clear where your sidebar and navigation is located, where your other categories can be viewed and so forth. If a reader comes from a search engine, they should know exactly where they have to click to get the information they want. Generally I say the less options the better in terms of other features on your blog.
3. There are certain pages you absolutely want to have on your site. These are a Privacy Policy page, an About Us page, and a Contact us page. Google in particular looks at these things as indicators of a serious, quality, non spammy site. Furthermore, you want to have an archives page (easily achieved by the SRG Clean Archives plugin if you use Wordpress), so as not to have your archives taking up valuable room in your blog sidebar.

There are more factors but for the sake of this article not being 9000 words, we'll move on.

Once you have an aesthetically pleasing blog, you need some reader pleasing content.

We're going to assume here that you have a product selected. Of course the next step after picking your niche (sometimes these tasks are one and the same) is to select a product that you'll promote to the niche. This is where you'll earn your cash.

So once you've got a product selected, and the base of a good blog created as above, your job is to create some content that the people in your niche will find valuable and use that content to drive your website's visitors to the merchant's page and earn an affiliate commission.

At this point, you should have your niche's keywords researched - by that I mean you should have some idea of what might be a good place to attack the niche from. Ideally you'd have some keyphrase related to your niche that are uncompetitive in terms of the number of pages optimized for them in the search engines.

Where you'd ideally start your content creation is by writing an article on this uncompetitive term, posting it on your site and getting it ranked in the search engines. From here, you can develop as much content on search phrases from your niche, as you desire (remember you got those phrases from a tool like the Wordtracker keyword tool) in order to increase traffic to your site.

Some factors we didn't get to mention in this article are things like On page optimization, making your pages of content rank well in the search engines - and monetization - the art of getting the highest percentage of visitors to your site actually making you money. But for a basic overview, I think we've done alright.

=> Easily Set Up Mini Websites & Claim Ongoing Passive Cash!

Step 3 - Traffic Generation

Lets look at how to drive traffic to your blog or mini site - the element of online marketing that most people get stuck at.

Here we'll look at the primary ways of driving quality traffic to your niche site. Keep in mind that the phrase QUALITY traffic is important - we only want the visitors who might buy our products and make us money - we don't want freebie seekers in this business model.

The first and best way to generate traffic is to do as I've described in the previous article, which is to produce content based on long tail keywords from your niche. After optimizing your page well for this term, and using the in built pinging function to notify other websites of your new content - you can be ranking and getting traffic for uncompetitive terms within the first few days of your site's existence.

After this, there are many ways to approach your traffic generation.

1. Article Marketing: This is essentially (though often misunderstood) the process of having articles you've written, published on websites other than your own, for the purpose of including a link back to your site and funneling traffic from their site to yours. You can do this with article directories or with other blogs and websites by contacting the site author. Either way, the extra exposure from these sites can drive through important relevant visitors to your pages.

2. Ongoing Keyword research and SEO: The reason I believe in having a big focus on SEO is that the people who have a specific problem and are looking for a solution, tend to gravitate toward a search engine. Yes there are millions of web viewers who don't go near a search engine but they can be harder to target and can represent not as high a quality traffic. In other words they don't tend to make you as much money.

Continually finding new keywords that represent relevant traffic for your products, and continually creating content to target those visitors is about as smart as you can be with ongoing traffic generation.

3. Link Building: This is both for the purpose of boosting your search engine rankings and increasing exposure to your website. You have probably heard that links back to your site from relevant websites indicate your site is more trust worthy and worthy of better SE rankings. At the same time, a link on a relevant website, whether in a piece of content on a sidebar, can increase visitors to your website. You should make it a point to continually do activities that motivate similar sites in your niche to link to you - or even if not in your niche, site's that could send you relevant visitors.

4. Using Social Networks: Using the myriad social networks like Digg, Mysapce, Facebook, Stumbleupon etc can be another great way to increase traffic to your website. Just by submitting all the posts you make to your blog to site's like Digg and Stumbleupon, you can earn yourself extra backlinks, and the potential to have your content seen and then shared by new members of your target audience. As is becoming clear, almost EVERYONE online hangs out at some social network for some reason, and if you can find where your target market is hanging out and leverage that, your traffic can increase exponentially.

Finally, remember that when trying to generate traffic to your blog, you should consider your niche before deciding which methods to utilize. As I've said before, using a social network might be great, but certain niches might be too technically unadvanced to know about social networks, and they only use Google. Some niches might be more easily approached by use of visual media like video rather than article content. The bottom line of traffic generation is, where is my target market hanging out, and how can I get my site in front of them in a way that contributes value to their lives.

I hope you've found this traffic generation article helpful. Next we'll look at the management of a successful blog.

=> The Software That Creates, Markets & Manages Quality Blogs!

Step 4 - Management

The final step in the process of having a successful and profitable niche blog is the management of your site.

Here I'm talking about management in terms of keeping your site running, monitoring what's working and what's not, and monitoring the success of your site so you know how much effort to commit to it on a continual basis.

Here are some of the elements involved in the management area of a successful blog.

1. You need to manage and track your search engine statistics. Here I mean two things. 1. is the doings of your search competition and 2. is the rankings and traffic from various pages of your site.

In 1. You need to be always checking up on your search competition. Just by knowing what sites link to your competitor site can allow you a way to gain new backlinks. You contact the same people and get the same links PLUS keep doing all the good SEO you're already doing, you can steal their spot.

In 2. You need to monitor your own search rankings to see what search terms are bringing you traffic. At this point you can either choose to focus more of your content on those terms, giving readers coming from those terms more to look at and more opportunities to get pushed to your affiliate link OR you can look harder at the monetization of those pages. This might include testing different affiliate link positionings, changing the text, and more.

Following on from that, something else that needs to be tracked on your blog, is how successful your content is at converting visitors to sales.

This has traditionally been tough on blogs because the way they are set doesn't generally allow for any form of split testing. However, a new blogging software called Firepow has made this possible. What you can do is test which content your audience responds best to. You can use variations of two different posts, have them alternate for each new user to the blog, and see which version of the post generated the most affiliate link clicks.

Optimizing your content like this may be the easiest way to increase your bottom line. After all think about this: If you want to double your profits from a site, you can either double your site traffic, or you can double your conversion rate... what's easier? In a lot of cases, it's doubling your conversion rate.

Finally, something that needs to be managed on your blog is the updating of your content. The most successful blogs and mini sites always have something new for their readers all the time, and when you're running more than one blog, this can be an ongoing challenge. The best thing you can do here is get yourself the help of some software like the above mentioned Firepow, which can help you manage a number of blog's content from one control panel. Something like this will give you the ability to post content on schedules, get notified of when a blog needs updating, and offer you options of how to get relevant content on to your site without your effort.

Combined with all the elements we've talked about in previous articles, managing your blog will put the profit icing on your blogging/mini site cake. I trust that you've found this series informative and helpful.
